ELECTRIC ENTERTAINMENT ACQUIRES EXCLUSIVE DISTRIBUTION RIGHTS TO FEATURE FILM “YEAR OF THE FOX”

Official Selection at the 2023 Seattle International Film Festival

“Blessed with a great cast, ‘Year of the Fox’ pulls us in from the first frame. It’s a film that feels like life in a way we rarely get.”

Los Angeles, CA – February 26, 2024 – Electric Entertainment, the Los Angeles-based production and distribution company, has acquired the exclusive North American distribution rights to the 2023 Seattle International Film Festival Official Selection, “Year of the Fox.” The deal gives Electric Entertainment all media rights. The announcement was made today by Dean Devlin, CEO of Electric Entertainment.

Directed by Megan Griffiths (“Sadie,” Amazon’s “The Summer I Turned Pretty”) and written by Eliza Flug, who also produced alongside Lacey Leavitt Gray and Jennifer Roth, “Year of the Fox” features compelling performances from Sarah Jeffery, Jane Adams, Jake Weber, and Balthazar Getty. Inspired by true events, this searing depiction of a wealthy community in the 90’s providing cover for predatory behavior delves into the complexities of power, privilege, and personal agency.

Dean Devlin comments, “This film offers a beautiful and intimate portrayal of a young girl's coming of age as she navigates through the complicated and difficult situations that life has given her. We are happy to be providing audiences in the U.S. and Canada with the opportunity to experience this film.”

Griffiths added, “We have been so gratified by the powerful dialogue the film has generated during our festival run, and we couldn’t be more thrilled to partner with Electric Entertainment to bring that conversation to wider audiences.”

Griffiths is represented by CAA and Jen Au Management. Ben Kim, VP of Development & Acquisitions at Electric Entertainment negotiated the deal with Ryan Kampe, president of Visit Films.

About “Year of the Fox”

A biracial teenager who was adopted into extreme wealth by white parents, 17-year-old Ivy (Sarah Jeffery) finds herself navigating the fallout of her parents’ bitter divorce. Set adrift in Aspen’s bacchanalian party scene in the ‘90s, Ivy’s previously idyllic world begins to unravel as she is plunged into a playground of toxicity where those with infinite wealth look to prey upon the young and innocent. In a society that allows men to dictate who she should be, Ivy must determine whether to follow the paths of her peers and the women before her or forge her way on her own terms.

“Year of the Fox” won Best Directing and Best Feature at the Catalina Film Festival, and received rave critical reviews during its film festival circuit. Film and Froth wrote, “What ties everything together is Megan Griffiths’ steady direction and clear vision. Her ability to tie in all of these characters and abstract ideas of power struggles revolving around a young woman finding herself is fascinating to watch unfold.” Moveable Fest said, “It’s an acute dread that writer Eliza Flug and director Megan Griffiths find rooted in the very specific identity of the teenager who is caught between a number of different worlds in ‘Year of the Fox.’”
